NO ONE TALK TO ME ABOUT SUPERMAN!

DAILY PLANE

UNLESS IT'S BASED ON TRUTH.

ANYONE REMEMBER TRUTH?

NO MORE EDITORIALS, HEADLINES, COMMENTARIES OR "LETTERS TO THE EDITOR" ABOUT BEING AFRAID OF SUPERMAN.

I DON'T WANT TO PRINT WHAT HE COULD DO, I WANT TO REPORT WHAT HE ACTUALLY DOES.

HE'S NOT BATMAN.

SUPERMAN HAS DONE NOTHING TO AROUSE ANY SUSPICION AND HAS DONE EVERYTHING TO TRY TO MAKE THIS OVERALL DUMP OF A PLANET A SAFER, BETTER PLACE THAN IT WAS THE DAY BEFORE.

SO THE VERY LEAST THIS NEWS SERVICE CAN DO IS THE SAME.

AND HEY, YES, DAMN RIGHT, THIS IS A NEWSROOM AND THAT MEANS IF SUPERMAN, OR ANY SUPER-ANYTHING SLIPS, WE WILL REPORT IT.

BUT...

AND NOW SHE HAS GONE OFF TO WRITE HER BIG BEST-SELLING, PEOPLE

Please, Perry, stop.

MY POINT IS, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN OF THE FREE PRESS:

THIS IS OUR NEW CITY BEAT REPORTER, STRAIGHT FROM THE STAR CITY SENTINEL...

WHAT IS THIS, KENT?

I HAD ALREADY READ THE LEXCORP BLACK MARKET PIECE BEFORE YOU SHOWED UP.

I WAS HOPING YOU'D COME IN HERE WITH A NEW DRAFT OR--SOME NEW ANGLE I CAN ACTUALLY PRINT.

PRINT?

SO MANY TIMES...YOUR WRITING HAS MOVED ME TO TEARS.

BUT--BUT WHERE IS THAT GUY?

HOW DO I GET HIM BACK?

IS IT LOIS?

I'M SORRY ABOUT ALL THAT BACK THERE. I THOUGHT YOU'D WANT THE OFFICE.

I WAS BEING CHEEKY AND I GUESSED WRONG. BUT, HONESTLY, I DON'T KNOW WHAT'S GOING ON WITH YOU.

DID YOU CHANGE YOUR MIND?

DO YOU WANT TO TELL ME WHAT HAPPENED?

WHERE ARE YOU IN THIS?

EVEN MORE IMPORTANT...WHERE IS SUPERMAN?

THIS IS-- THIS IS LIKE READING THE GOTHAM GAZETTE POLICE BLOTTER.

THE DC NATION CONVERSATION:

SCOTT SNYDER & BRIAN MICHAEL BENDIS

By Mike Cotton

The two comic giants discuss what they envy about each other's writing, how to avoid rivalries and the exciting future of the DC Universe

DC Comics publisher Dan DiDio raced through Burbank on a covert mission just after sundown in early November.

Canvassing the area surrounding DC Comics' offices near the Warner Bros. studios, the 16-year DC vet searched for Scott Snyder, desperately needing to speak with the creative force behind some of DC's biggest hits of the last decade, including the recent blockbuster DARK NIGHTS: METAL, and a long and much-loved run on DC's flagship BATMAN series.

When DiDio finally found the 42-year-old Long Island native, Snyder assumed it was bad news. No way a top-level corporate exec tracks you down in person to shoot the breeze. "Uh-oh," he thought to himself as he excused himself from a sushi dinner. "This has to be bad news. What happened? Is DC broken? What is it?"

DiDio smiled.

"I have big news, and it's good," the gregarious publisher grinned.

A thousand miles north, Brian Michael Bendis, the primary creative voice of the Marvel Comics universe for the last 16 years, sat at his keyboard with news of his own to deliver, staring back at him in a series of blank, unsent emails.

He needed to say good-bye, and he needed to do it now.

Both DiDio and Bendis shared the same fear–that the news of Bendis' unexpected and earth-shaking move from Marvel to DC would leak, and the people they were closest to would learn about it online, through rumors or worse: a sanitized press release

Superstar artist and DC Publisher Jim Lee shares a look at his designs for Superman's newest and most deadly foe

Writer Scott Williams can't wait, and colorist Alex Sinclair is champing at the bit to get his hands on Jim Lee's newest pages.

Working at a steady clip of about a page a day for the last week, Lee's produced some of the most detailed, action-packed and flat-out gorgeous pages of his career–and that's saying something for the 53-year-old comic legend and DC publisher.

Some of what Lee's most excited about, as he draws the original, 12-page preview of Brian Michael Bendis' Man of Steel mini-series (issue #1 on sale May 30th), is the new big bad–Rogol Zaar.

Lee and Bendis collaborated on ideas for the villain, and it immediately began to inspire Lee.

"It was a weird like oh-gotsu problem with a lot of variables," says Lee. "I think a lot of it started getting informed once Brian started telling me about the character's background. That he was this chieftain, that he was a rebel. There's bits of Orc-ish, warlord in there. That's where I started."

Here's a sneak peek of some of the early work the artist produced as he and Bendis talked about the new Superman foe.
